THE CELEBRATION.

from every clime and the products of the industry of the world. The arid plains crossed by the great nature from their bosom to a nation's herds and flocks, moistened by the melting snows, conducted away inland from every stream. Then sands have been vivified until they have become verdant fields of grain, more than sufficient to feed every living thing within this new western empire. Cities and towns are everywhere upon it; churches, schools, temples of art, aqueducts, electricity communicating human thoughts and purposes through the mystical metal nerves and fibers, beautifying and ennobling its municipalities, tropical fruits and flowers give aroma to its atmosphere and tint its landscape; within it the human heart is made full of gladness, the human imagination finds the limit of its capacity. Whether we seek the most useful of human inventions, the most beautiful conceptions of human genius, the most invigorating or delicious of earth's products, the comers of today will find them somewhere in this vast stretch of plain and mountain where forty years ago a civilized habitation was unknown and uncultivated nature held unquestioned sway. A small, insignificant grain of corn was the magician's wand creating this magical transformation. With its discovery the outer doors of these western prairies and their vaults were pried ajar and gave up its hidden treasure, and from then till now the world's people have been busy in bringing with and creating all that surrounds us of human origin and applying their genius and industry to unbinding the power of nature's forces and setting free the vast stores of golden grain so strongly barred within them.

Forty-nine and fifty-nine were the beginning of the two periods which added the pillars of the western and Pacific states to the support of the broad dome of American liberty. We see around us all the good and noble achievements resulting from them; the physical suffering, the blighted hopes, the disappointed ambitions of their architects, are all behind us, the memory of their sufferings casts a shadow over the pages of our history. The world recognizes in Wichita the most magical city of the ages. In its success we anticipate the great local benefits that national results. Here the millions of capital lying idle in the older states will find the stone, the clay and fuel and harvest which will turn it to paying investments. Here in the west the antiquarian will be brought face to face with the relics of Aztec civilization—the pottery, tools, habitation, laws and customs of a race now in the tomb and living only in the maze of legend and tradition. To the business men of our city and commonwealth the charm of life consists of the pursuit of making money. By him as such poetry may be extracted from grim figures as from any of the signs by which human thought is expressed. In seeking pleasure he does not alone look to the western mountain peaks which penetrate the azure heavens, covered with everlasting snows, nor to the gentle slopes fringed with willows, verdant with flowers of such bewitching forms and hues that cultivation only mars them; nor to their streams from melting snows which rush and flow so musically between dizzy precipices and through broad valleys which lazily vibrate in the hazy glow of our summer sun; nor to our clear blue sky and atmosphere, untroubled with fog or mist, which annihilates space and tinges the cheek with ruddy health; but rather to the click of the grain drill whose language is set to nature's music. The queen city of the plains for hundreds of miles north, south and west, the continent pays constant tribute. Nine lines of railway, which are still stretching out their iron arms to encircle new possessions, carry in and out the multitude and distribute the contents of her warehouses and the products of her shops.

WITHOUT A RIVAL. She is without a rival, and envy has been silenced in her presence. The people of the state in making her their commercial capital paid her a tribute which was as fitting as that which it was generously given. From its stock boards may issue the quotations which will govern the commercial transactions of this western empire; from its mint will follow streams of coin upon which the commerce of the world is based. Let us take a look at Kansas and Wichita ten years hence; three millions of prosperous and happy people within her borders; a quarter of a million inhabiting her commercial center, the great metropolis of corn and wheat, half the continent besides. Her plains and valleys veiled beneath a sea of golden grain; the earth tumbled and riveted into a network of iron roads to surrender its hidden wealth; looms and spindles consuming our product of wool in the weaving of materials for garments. Farms glowing in the manufacture of iron and steel fashioned into multitudinous forms; our sands with proper alloys, converted into glass; our clay transformed into all shapes of vases. Thousands of miles of railway steaming across the plain and canon, training over every pass and touching every hamlet. The rails upon which the cars run, and motive power applied, the product of our own workshop. Churches rivaling in beauty of design, the cathedrals of Europe and the mosques of Asia. Colleges attended by the youth of many lands; the tide of summer travel commencing across the ocean, gathering in volume as it passes. American cities, reaching its flood each year amid the beauties, the grandeur, and the romances of our plains. Discounted removed beyond our line a boundary the barriers of solid peace advancing prosperity, regard for law, elevated morals and benignity, the continuity the talismanic watchword of the people.

EVENING AT RIVERSIDE. The evening was spent in dancing and other amusements in addition to the fireworks. As would be expected, it was the feature that took most of the people back again and caused them to remain there. The Hutchinson special train over the Santa Fe left last night at 10:30. The visitors seemed to be well pleased. The band consisting of twenty-nine pieces gave complete satisfaction and was highly complimented by all. In the afternoon they serenaded the Carey hotel, John Herbig's cigar factory, the Eagle office, Hotel Metropole, Boston Monarch billiard hall, and the Occidental. The committee having the band in charge aimed to make the day pleasant for the boys. The other special trains left about 11 o'clock, and as far as could be observed, all were highly pleased with the day in the city.

The streets last night offered little comfort to the nervous people. The kids had turned loose with the fire crackers and they could spot a nervous fellow who got the best line of crackers on hand. The more he was disturbed, the better the kids were pleased. Some nervous little fellow had the cheek to come out in a carriage with a horse nearly as skittish as himself. He went bobbing up Main and when in front of Hyde & Hunsbly, the boys were well posted and a giant bomb took action near his horse, and man, horse and carriage took a top movement. They went round several times, and after while the horse got nearly up to first street when the fellow returned with hot words and showed the extreme discomposure and common sense to tackle a hundred kids and threaten to whip, beat, kill and arrest. A few more houses went down on him, and he took the hint.

SOCIAL ETIQUETTE.

Some Admirable Traits of Foreign Society Not Yet Quite Attained in America.

There is a simplicity and absence of self consciousness in the manners of foreigners, according to Mrs. Sherwood, which has not yet reached America. She affirms that you will rarely see a bashful Frenchman. He asks you to his wedding, his simple dinner or his little feast, offering you the best he has, and as he is not thinking of himself, but of you, as he is not ashamed of his small means, he makes you perfectly happy. Such a thing as a capricious hostess is known in America, but it is not known on the Continent.

A capricious woman who forgets that she has asked you to dine to whom she has no own dinner, who invites more people than she has room for, but who is so graceful and fascinating and lovely that everybody forgives her, is one of the agonies of society, for she makes every one uncomfortable and yet nobody can do without her.

Phyllis is my only joy. Changeful as the winds of morning, All my vows and raptures soaring, She'll no ancient wishes tease, Yet she never fails to please.

except when seven or eight other people are put out by her little wiles.

A Society Man's Motto. "The man who hesitates is conversationally lost." Never discard a remark as being too obvious, the chances being that after anxious thought you have to return to it in default of a better, and your audience thinks, if she is to say to you, "I have been thinking of that!" This is the secret of the success which sometimes attends very dull people. They have no sense of shame. There is no platitude too palpable for their exposition, and in consequence they are in full swing with that pretty Miss Robinson, while you are silent and anxious waiting for promptings which never come.

Slovenly Speech. Abjure slang sternly and upon principle. If for no other reason because it narrows your vocabulary. It is the favorite refuge of the slovenly and the indolent. If your thought does not deserve a neat dress, keep it in some back closet of your own brain.

Slow Time Assured. Mrs. Jinks—Yes, I've sent Sims, the colored man, for the doctor.

Mrs. Blinks—Sent Sims? Mercy me! He won't get there for two hours. He used to be a hotel waiter.—New York Weekly.

A Queer Belief. Once upon a time, a car containing gold and silver coins was burned on its way from the mint to Washington, and in the ruins the searchers found two silver dollars held firmly together by a few shavings of wood.

Remedy for Hay Fever. We give you the latest alleged remedy for hay fever. Try it and kindly report: Vapor of camphor and steam is recommended. The vapor is made to come in contact with the outer surface of the face, surrounding the nose by means of a paper cone placed with the narrow end downward in a vessel containing hot water and a drachm of coarsely powdered or shredded camphor. If this is continued ten or twenty minutes at a time, and repeated three or four times in as many hours, a cure is usually effected.—Boston Cor. Herald of Health.

Nature Arranges It. "When the war ended I guess there were about fifteen or twenty girls to every fellow; but now the thing is about even again, I reckon, for I never used the like of boy babies in my life as there has been since the war, and it is or provision of nature, I reckon."—Pittsburg in Atlanta Constitution.

He Was a Messenger Boy. Omaha Mother—Why, Bobby, how you have grown since you were home last!

Son (a messenger boy)—Yes, it's been a long time. I've delivered three letters since I've been away. —Omaha World.

A Financier. "You wish to marry one of my daughters. The youngest will get 15,000 marks, the second 30,000, and the oldest 45,000."

"You don't happen to have one still older?"—Filagrade Reporter.

To preserve apples, pack in boxes or barrels elevated from the cellar floor, with a layer of sawdust in the bottom of each box or barrel, then a layer of apples placed out of contact with each other, and a layer of sawdust, and so on till all are full.

"How did you get along at school today, Tom?" asked the old man at supper. "Papa, our physiology says that conversation at meals should be of a pleasant character. Let's talk of the minstrels!"—Terra Haute Express.

EVERY BODY TAKE A SWIM. The Nataratorium the Finest in the West.
